Long Range Crisis Predicted

By Floyd Luke
News Editor

We are in deep trouble.

This was the thesis of Stewart Udall, former Secretary of the Interior, in his speech entitled "The Energy-Environmental Crisis," Tuesday. It was attended by about 250 at Showalter Auditorium.

"I am not talking about the 1973 energy crisis in which we are now involved, I am talking about the energy crisis within the next 20 or 30 years, that is a much different thing," he said.

"We are in deep trouble because we are running out of oil, a product on which this nation depends. About 75 percent of the energy of this country comes from oil and natural gas."

"We are in such deep trouble, that this energy crisis is going to change American lives more than anything we have experienced. This is major event and something very real," Udall said.

He said the energy crisis will mean changes in the next 20 to 30 years and working in a different direction in such areas as transportation systems, architecture, attitudes toward American cities and personal life styles.

Oil Reserves

We have eight years of oil remaining (in terms of proven reserves), Udall said. The oil from the Alaskan Pipeline will last about two years at the current rate of consumption.

"If we are going to continue to use oil, we must find a record oil field every three years. There have been no new fields discovered since 1967," he said.

"I think we are foolish to count on any reserves except for reserves that have been blocked out, delineated, and that we know are there. But we probably have at most 18 to 22 years of oil remaining," he said.

There are no real, meaningful substitutes for oil that are comparable in price and quality. He said coal and oil shale are not substitutes. The problem is not to find more oil reserves, but to stretch the present reserves and make it last twice as long.

"What remaining oil we have becomes very important to us because oil is a precious resource, it is exhaustible and once it is gone it is gone," he said.

"People think that when the Arab embargo is lifted, the oil companies will get out their drilling rigs, they will come up with some big new fields and by summer, in time for Expo, we will all be back in our cars traveling across the country. Don't bet on it," he said.

End of Automobile Culture

"We are at the climax of the American automobile culture. There will never be anything like it in the history of man. We had an automobile culture because we had an abundance of cheap petroleum," Udall said.

"We are in deep trouble. History has moved so rapidly we have not even noticed it. In 1954 the U.S. pumped from its oil wells one half of the oil that was pumped in the entire world and we used almost all of it in this country," he said.

"We are the most gluttonous people in the world. We are six percent of the world population and we use a third of the world's energy. We are not only the world's users but we are the world's biggest wasters, we are energy pigs," Udall said.

Eliminating waste should be the exercise of the 1970's. American is going to have to make some big changes, he said.

More busses, public transportation such as railroads and high mileage automobiles are needed. We are going to turn around and come back on the road on which we came. This country, 20 years ago, had good efficient forms of public transportation, he said.

"We are also going to have to look at our urbanization policies and housing policies. The energy crisis will mean an end to urban sprawl which was made possible by cheap gasoline," he said. People are either moving their homes or moving their jobs.

"We are running out of cheap land, cheap minerals and cheap water. It is all happening, it is all coming together. The energy crisis is just the first thing that is beginning to hit us and it is the warning of other things that are coming. It is not a freaky thing that is going to disappear," he said.

American industry has been enormously wasteful, he said. It is wasteful because energy has been inexpensive.

Provides Alternatives

Udall suggested that in the short run, Americans must conserve energy and in the long run, alternate sources of energy or replacements for the kinds of energy we are now using must be found.

Stewart Udall — Former Secretary of the Interior, spoke to a group of about 250 students concerning the seriousness of the energy crisis.

Solar energy, which could provide energy for about two thirds of homes and geothermal energy, which makes use of wastes could be valuable alternatives, although the production of such would involve new areas of technology and mass production.

Change has already started, he said, it is shown by the demand for small autos but the most hopeful thing is that quietly the young people have made a new population policy. That is the two child family is here and the zero population growth track is started. This will make all of our problems more manageable, Udall said.

"It already begins to fit together, the small family, the small car and the small house or apartment. The message which I am giving you is we are in trouble, think conservation, think efficiency, think small, think snug and think slow," he said in his closing remarks.

White House Reporters To Compare Notes

Two of Washington, D.C.'s crack reporters will be on campus Wednesday to speak on "National Security vs. Freedom of the Press" at 1 p.m. in Showalter Hall.

Brit Hume, an investigative reporter for Jack Anderson's syndicated Washington column, and Bob Woodward, one of two young reporters from the Washington Post that helped break the Watergate Scandal story, will be guests of the EWSC Associated Students Contemporary Issues Bureau.

Hume is the reporter who talked to Dita Beard, the ITT lobbyist who wrote the ill-fated memo about exchanging a donation to the 1972 Republican National Convention for the settling of the Justice Department's anti-trust suits against ITT. The 28-year-old journalist was also instrumental in the Anderson papers; the expose of the Nixon Administration's private attitudes about the India-Pakistan war.

Hume has recently published a book titled "Death and the Mines," the story of the United Mine Workers. In his work, Hume discusses the miner's struggle against the deadly black-lung disease and sets forth the alleged corruption of the mine workers union and their president Tony Boyle.

Woodward and co-reporter Carl Bernstein were named in the Pulitzer citation awarded to the Washington Post for uncovering the Watergate scandal. Woodward and Bernstein, went to work on the story three days after the June 17 break-in at the offices of the Democratic Party.

In the months that followed the two reporters took turns writing and following up leads that gradually implicated White House officials and members of the Committee to Re-elect the President. Woodward was virtually unknown outside of Washington until a year ago when the Watergate story broke. The 30-year-old Yale graduate worked on a suburban weekly in Maryland before joining the Post.

A luncheon is planned for the reporters before their talks by the members of The Easterner staff.

Student Government Gets Health Center Complaints

Students with complaints against the Student Health Center should contact Joe Claudio, assistant to the Associated Students President at the AS offices, 356-2514. Claudio said student government is attempting to improve health center services.

Next Issue Quarter's Last

Next week's Easterner dated March 7 will be the last issue of winter quarter.

An issue had earlier been planned for March 14. That issue will not be published to make up for the extra issue that was published fall quarter.

Consequently, The Easterner's literary page scheduled to appear March 14 will appear in next week's paper.

Opportunity Given

AS Legislature has within its grasp an opportunity to make student government more responsible, trim its budget and insure capable leadership. At the same time, however, the Legislature is being tempted to take a giant step backwards.

Two opposing Constitutional revisions are currently before the Legislature. The proposal submitted by Legislator Frank Marksman and Director of Elections Pat O'Donnell affords the chance for a positive change in student government.

In discussing the Marksman-O'Donnell proposal Legislator Eric Burd said rather cynically "We can't do any worse than we are doing now."

But things could be worse, a lot worse, if the second proposal backed by Legislator Mike Carter is adopted. Carter's proposal would set up a strong executive branch of student government whose power would far outstrip that of Legislature.

By giving the AS President the power to veto legislation The Legislature would be rendered almost powerless. Carter said the executive branch would be responsible to the Legislature in that executives would be required to submit quarterly reports to the Legislature but that requirement has only been carried out on a minimal basis.

Although stating he believed student government needed a strong executive Carter did not offer any reasons for that belief. One plausible explanation is Carter himself is planning to run for AS President and is seeking now to enhance the powers of the office should he be elected.

The choices between the two proposals and the ramifications of each are clearly distinct. What the Legislature must choose between is an opportunity to better serve students needs or, quite simply, one man rule.

Students In Trouble

It seems we really are in "deep trouble" as Stuart Udall declared in his speech Tuesday. It appears that most of Eastern's students are unconcerned about the current and future energy crisis.

No more than 250 persons attended the Udall speech. And as Udall said, "those not attending will be sorry." Udall said that in the short run the American people must conserve energy but it is amazing to see the number of cars guzzling gas between Cheney and Spokane with just one occupant, the driver.

Students seem insensible and ignorant about the seriousness of the energy shortage problem. Of 2,700 questionnaires mailed to students regarding the possibility of forming car pools a mere 240 were returned.

Perhaps next fall when the program is tried again and should gas prices keep rising, car pooling will meet with more success. It seems the sure way to get people's attention is to hit them where it hurts -- the pocketbook.

Dear Editor:

As I read the Feb. 14 issue of The Easterner I was sickened by what has developed on this campus. It seems that the projects to get different races to learn to live together is not only a farce but has backfired.

I see Chicano Week, Black Week, and Indian Week but no Ukrainian Week, Puerto Rican Week, Greek Week, Asian Week or White Week (I hear that we are not allowed to have one). Why not have a PEOPLE WEEK? Now, I definitely feel underprivileged for not having all that money spent on me and because I am not allowed by own "Week." These projects certainly make me "aware of the group," but I doubt if it erases any stereotype (if I had any) of any other group. If anything, it reinforces one and makes a more definite racial difference.

I wish that so-called minorities would erase the stereotype of anyone white being an "anglo" who has a stereotype of stereotyping anyone else not white. The point is that the population of the earth is too great to keep separating the people who have a slightly different chromosome structure. We all have to live here together and I do not think that giving special privileges to people of different races helps to bring us all together.

Right now because I happen to lack certain skin pigmentation, I must work to get through school, while some people have not had the opportunity to realize the value of an education attained by hard work. Am I, too, a minority (besides being female) as my family has most likely been in this country 100 years less than many black families, as they fled out of Europe just before the First World War? Do I see any free rides through school or red carpets laid out?

I realize this attitude is not representative of the total of these ethnic groups.

Evidently, we are not an equal people anymore, as some feel that because of past events concerning their people they should have special privileges above everyone else. Why do they not have to work like "other people?" Why must we attempt to right a wrong that was made many years ago--it is over, past history, which we now had nothing to do with.

Besides being a fad, behind all of this stands the dollar sign in the form of taxes we pay to people who think we are a "common enemy in society." Go ahead, bite the hand that feeds you--and call yourself men!

Football Attendance And Election Turnout

It was only a matter of time until some female read Public Law 92-318 and discovered that women could not be "subjected to discrimination" or "denied benefits" of the athletics program here at Eastern.

Virginia Asan, director of women's athletics, referred to this public law in an appeal to Eastern's Board of Trustees. She contended there is an unacceptable inequity between the men's athletic budget of $64,000 and the women's budget of $8,200 in a school whose student body is comprised of 42 per cent females.

Our female student body president indicated that the elimination of football might provide the funds to satisfy the women's request (Hats off to anyone who includes a tuition increase in their solution).

Do away with football! Football is the only sport that pays its way, I thought to myself. So I climbed to the third floor of Showalter to talk to Dean Hegewald, accounting office.

"How much do we make on football games here at Eastern?" I asked.

Hegewald took time to show me the financial record of the athletic programs offered here.

"Let's see....expenditures (totally from student fees) for football are $22,524....revenues total $4,425."

"Well," I observed, "at least that helps whittle down that $22,524 expenditure."

"No, almost all that goes for trophies and awards," answered Hegewald.

"Oh," I remarked.

I was sure of one thing, the students wouldn't stand for the elimination of our football team. "What students?" someone asked.

I grabbed the phone and dialed Dr. Robert Anderson, director of athletics, the man who could give me the facts and figures.

"Hello, I would like to get the total number of student fans that attended football games at Woodward Field last fall."

Anderson replied "You bet, I've got the information right here (pause). The season opened on Sept. 22 against Oregon College and 593 students purchased tickets, the game on Oct. 13 drew 703 students, on Oct. 27 there were 601. Nov. 10 there were 632 and the season's final game drew 408 student fans."

"If we add the cheerleaders and players, I think we can stretch the student average attendance to 9 per cent per game," I concluded. "The facts aren't overwhelming."

"You one of those people who wanna see football dropped?" asked Anderson.

"I'm not sure, just collecting information," I replied.

"Well," he continued, "you might be interested to know that more students attend one of these football games than vote in the student elections."

Gasp! How daring. Was the director of athletics proposing that we do away with elected student officers? My mind groped for a rebuttle but nothing came.

After an embarrassing silence I hung up the receiver. The good director of athletics was probably right.

"Now that student government and football have been eliminated women's sports should receive more money."

No Jazz Action

Dear Editor,

On Jan. 29 I attended my first A.S. meeting at Eastern. I was to represent the EWSC Jazz Ensemble concerning noon concerts in the PUB. Not only was our topic never reached, but I was advised by President Worthington that it would be futile to remain.

That was the day that Frank Marksman made it known that several A.S. officers were unqualified for their positions, according to the Constitution they supposedly represent. Since that time, via The Easterner, conversations with fellow students, and some first-hand observation, I have seen personal quarrels, "Political" battles, and much inefficiency on the part of our student government.

The courts, in allowing these people to remain at their posts only because there was no adequate legislation to deal with such a problem, have also displayed their lack of ability and/or action. I can only assume our student government to be grossly incompetent or arrogantly apathetic, and I am thankful that I am graduating soon, so that no more of my college funds will go to such "organizations."

For those who must remain here another year or more, perhaps it is time to take a more serious consideration on matters such as the power of your vote. It may not have to be this way.

Joke Termed Not So Funny

By Rob Allen
Staff Writer

Female residents of the ninth floor in Dressler Hall were recipients of a practical joke that could have spelled disaster early Tuesday.

Shortly after 1 a.m. a ninth floor resident telephoned Campus Safety office stating that she was locked in her room. Normally it is impossible to be locked in due to the fact that the doors in Dressler unlock from the inside.

Officers responded to the call and found the door had been "slugged" with three pennies taped together blocking the opening of the door. Further investigation revealed that each of the doors on the floor had been "slugged."

"Had there been a fire, the results would have been disastrous," said Sgt. Larry Montague of the campus police Tuesday. "Had there even been a false alarm, someone could have gone into hysterics," he said.

An archway window valued at $300 was broken by a flying rock last week in Pearce Hall. Campus police are investigating suspects from fifth floor of Dressler.

Campus authorities were called to Morrison Hall Friday night to investigate a series of window breakings. The officers arrived on the scene to find a plastic lounge chair had been thrown through a seventh floor window. They also discovered a fire extinguisher had been thrown through a window on the fifth floor. Other damage was reportedly done in the hallway between Morrison and Streeter.

According to campus authorities, Rich Kaufman, Morrison Hall director, has suggested that Campus Safety officials be posted in the dorm every Thursday, Friday and Saturday night between midnight and 4 a.m. to guard against vandalism.

Charles R. DePoe, director of physical plant, reported to campus authorities Monday that two small pine trees in the campus mall near the Hall of Sciences had been run over by an automobile. The trees were valued at $50 each.

A tape deck valued at $50 was taken from a student vehicle parked at the corner of Elm and Washington around noon Sunday. The thieves apparently gained entry to the car by breaking in a wing window.

An undetermined amount of food was taken from a vending machine in Dressler Hall over the weekend. Jim Morris, director of the co-ed facility, reported the break-in to campus authorities Sunday.

Environmental Expert Speaks

President and publisher of "Scientific American," Gerard Piel, will appear on campus next week.

Piel will lecture on "Must Technology Take Charge" Tuesday at 2 p.m. at Showalter Auditorium. Topics including growth, population, pollution and ecology will be discussed.

Incident At Tawanka Results In Arrests

By E. P. Copperhead
Staff Writer

Long referred to as the star of the show at Tawanka meal times, picturesque but usually non-verbal Debra Stunner erupted into speech last Wednesday after dinner. Most witnesses agree that what shaped up as a women's lib, male chauvinist confrontation was cause of the outburst.

Two men, reeking of beer and what was described as "a smell like what pot smells like," were waiting for seconds on the Tawanka chicken. The students in question, Joe Wocsom, sophomore herpetology major, and Fred McGurder, graduate obstetrician, had commented on the lack of the bird with "the breast is yet to come." Unfortunately, at that time Ms. Stunner appeared in line and the boys wouldn't let a good pun die.

Wocsom, working toward his doctorate, diagnosed Ms. Stunner as suffering from a severe case of femininity. After quick consultation with his associate, they agreed she should be operated on. Debra, however, tired of being the butt of their joke, demanded a halt. This apparently only aggravated the situation and the hopeful Dr. Wocsom playfully staged what he referred to as a "mock assault" on Debra while she herself was getting chicken.

In the turmoil that followed, Campus Police made several arrests. The one most hotly challenged is that of Ms. Stunner herself for inciting a riot. The judge ruled no contest and she is currently serving a two week suspended sentence.

Wocsom was held for being obnoxious and later released to Goofy's. McGurder was charged with operating without a license. He has, as a result, been forced out of medicine and was heard threatening to enter politics.

Editor's Note -- The Easterner is proud to present this second spot news account by Mr. Copperhead. Others will appear sporadically throughout the year as the roving reporter keeps his nose alert for news.

Blindness Adds Dimension To College Student's Life

By Kelly McManus
Feature Writer

Julie DeGeus has attended EWSC for nearly six months yet she has never seen the campus and probably never will. DeGeus is blind.

But DeGeus, a junior majoring in social work, has not found her blindness to be a serious drawback in pursuing her education.

"I wouldn't consider it a real handicap," said DeGeus. "It has just added a few more unique dimensions to my education."

DeGeus attended Whitworth for two years before coming to Eastern and although she "loves" Whitworth, she has still found EWSC to be a "good school" for blind students.

"I had a little trouble finding my way around at first because of the size but now it's easy and the services at Tawanka are laid out well for blind students," said DeGeus. "I have also found the professors to be very helpful and understanding. I was surprised that a school of this size would offer so much individual attention."

DeGeus said that her easy adaption to college life might be due to the fact that she has attended public schools all her life.

"I really sound prejudiced when I talk about the advantages of public schools but I would say that they are definitely better," said DeGeus. "I know many people who attended the state institution and they were really insecure when they got to college."

"I would admit that the state school has better facilities for teacher subjects like home-ec and P.E. to the blind but anyway you look at it, an institution is still an institution," she added.

DeGeus's blindness was caused by excess oxygen scarring her retina when she and her twin sister were born prematurely. Her sister's eyes were unaffected.

"My sister and I are one of the few cases in the U.S. where one twin can see perfectly and the other is blind," said DeGeus. "Fortunately, the condition that caused my blindness was remedied about one year later and there are now very few cases of it."

DeGeus said that her family has been very important in helping her overcome her blindness.

"The attitude of your family is really important in determining what you will be able to do," said DeGeus.

She now enjoys swimming, water skiing, bowling, roller skating, square dancing, and playing her guitar.

DeGeus plans on becoming a marriage and family counselor after she gets her masters degree. She said that she feels the family is the basic unit of humanity and that "you can really help people at that level."

The majority of people that DeGeus encounters are understanding about blindness, she said. But there is—"always some prejudice—people are either afraid or over-protective. It is our job to teach them."

DeGeus said that the "younger generation" of blind people is attempting to increase their independence and that the use of seeing eye dogs is becoming outmoded because of this.

"I would much rather have a cane than a dog because I don't like the idea of having to depend on a dog instead of myself," said DeGeus. "There seems to be quite a bit more stigma attached to a blind person with a dog and you attract more notice, also."

DeGeus has attended two summer mobility sessions in Salem, Oregon to increase her freedom. She received instruction there in proper cane travel, how to tell directions, how to walk with a sighted person and how to ride buses. She also learned how to cross streets alone but said that she basically relies on "hops."

DeGeus estimated that it takes blind students about twice as long to do their homework as sighted students. She uses a tape recorder, a special Braille typewriter, and a slaten stylus (portable Braille writer for notetaking) in her studies and her text books are recorded in Seattle for listening use. She also uses "readers" which are students who read the material aloud to her.

"I've had real good luck with readers at EWSC," said DeGeus. "They've really been reliable but you have to do your work when they are available. In research I feel like I'm not doing my own work."

DeGeus added that it would really help the blind students if professors would decide on their books earlier because the blind students must get them taped in Seattle.

Other than her Bible, DeGeus owns no Braille books and receives all her pleasure reading material and magazines from the Library for the Blind in Seattle.

DeGeus admits that there are some trials in being blind.

"When I was younger, sometimes I would wonder—why me?" said DeGeus. "But then I realized that God has given me many other talents and skills that I can develop."

Car Pooling Called Flop

Eastern's attempt to establish a car pool between Spokane and Cheney has failed.

Only 240 of the 2,700 questionnaires sent out by the college soliciting participation in the car pool were returned. From the returns, about half drivers and half riders, a few individual car pools were established but the program director called the results "disappointing."

"I was surprised at the small return," said Bruce Murray, assistant director of student services who coordinated the effort. "I expected at least 500. It indicates to me that people still aren't willing to sacrifice to make such a program go."

Murray said the program would be tried again fall quarter.

"We haven't felt the full impact of the gasoline shortage here yet," Murray said. "Maybe by then (fall quarter) the car pool will interest more people."

Sigma Tau Alpha Sets Local Drive

A membership drive is underway by Sigma Tau Alpha, national honors society for Rainbow girls and Majority members.

Debbie Amburgy, president of the campus chapter, said the drive will continue through their March 9 initiation ceremony at the Spokane Masonic Temple. The organization also hopes to start a regular Rainbow assembly in Cheney.

COULD YOU LIKE A COMEDY THAT ASKS SERIOUSLY: CAN WORKING FOR A LIVING REALLY BE A RATIONAL ACT? Once in a great while an outrageous film comes along and makes you feel so good you float home about six inches off the ground. KID BLUE is such a movie.

It is strictly a fun good time film. It's about Bickford Waner, starting a new life in Dimebox, Texas, in 1902. It's about Roman baths, cow chips. The Great American Ceramic Novelty Company, chicken plucking, aerocycles, a mean nasty sheriff, sombrero ashtrays with flags in them, 3 Indians, mad preacher Bob, shoe shines, and the champion of the little man - the kid himself. We think you'll love KID BLUE. If you do, please tell your friends: if you don't, we'll give you your money back.

Trevino Teed Off

When lofty Lee Trevino makes his invasion of the Inland Northwest in April two things are certain. One is that veteran sports commentator Ray Scott will not be there. The other is that for $12 this veteran will not be there either. I could've seen Bob Dylan for less than $12.

Trevino, who will compete in a four-player exhibition match at Liberty Lake Golf Course, is not very happy with Ray Scott these days. And this is putting Trevino's disposition mildly, to be sure.

It seems that Scott, prompted by his boss, asked Trevino to delay his birdie putt on the 17th green for 20 seconds in last week's Jackie Gleason Golf Classic. So the putt could get on live television.

Setting the Stage

Trevino had been previously aggravated or agitated by the CBS-TV crew earlier in the tournament.

Trevino has not won a tournament for nearly a year.

He was right in the thick of things at the 17th green as he was tied for the lead. The pressure, needless to say, was on.

And now, just before he is about to make his crucial birdie attempt at 17, Scott tells Trevino to hold his putt up for 20 seconds so it will get on live TV. Scott, only acting under the orders of his producer-director Frank Chirkinia, now is caught right in the middle of his boss and Trevino. That alone could be worth the purple-heart.

Not Too Thrilled

Trevino of course isn't too thrilled about the whole affair. He blew the golf tournament on that very same 17th green. Right after Scott's distracting words he promptly missed his birdie putt and then missed an easy 12-inch tap-in. I thought I saw smoke coming out of his ears on television when he missed that short putt. Now I know why.

Chirkinia says it was all a joke, that they (he and Scott) didn't mean for Trevino to delay his putt. But it doesn't matter now as it could've cost Trevino $40,000. That is no laughing matter. Chirkinia was wrong for thinking up the idea and Scott was wrong for doing it.

Trevino had every right to be upset about it. After all, what can anybody do about it now that it has happened: Make Chirkinia and Scott write, "I will be a good boy" 100 times on a scorecard?

Owls & 'Cats Share Title

By Jon White
Sports Editor

Playing the part of the "spoiler" Eastern Oregon surprisingly upset Eastern Washington 62-58 last Friday as the Eagles were forced to settle for a three-way tie with Central Washington and Oregon Tech for the Evergreen championship.

The Wildcats and Owls also ended their conference campaign last Friday. Central edged Oregon College of Education 66-63 behind a strong second half rally and Tech stung Southern Oregon 76-69. EWSC, CWSC and OIT all ended the season with 8-4 marks.

The Eagles, minus Bernie Hite who was ill, led 23-7 early in the game and 35-21 at halftime. But the Mounties bounced back quickly in the second half, scoring the first six points of the session. EOC successfully contained EWSC's sensational freshman, Ron Cox, inside as the Eagles were plagued by 14 turnovers.

Townsend Smokes

The Mounties' Ron Townsend, leading scorer in the conference and candidate for EvCo Player of the Year honors, did most of the damage scoring 24 points. He got 20 of those in the second half.

EWSC came back to be within two points with two minutes remaining, Mark Seil connecting on a jump shot. But the Eagles never got closer than two points in the final moments.

The Eagles concluded their regular season last night in Spokane against Whitworth.

Ron Cox led the Eagle attack (which was again without Bernie Hite) scoring 18 points. Mark Seil and Chris Brown each added 14 points.

The Warriors lost despite the torrid shooting of Anthony Mann who got 28 points. Eric Clark scored 19 points in LC's losing cause.

Easterner 1974 All-Conference Set Next Week

Next week The Easterner will announce its 1974 Evergreen All-Conference basketball team and Player of the Year.

Leading candidates for Player of the Year honors are Eastern Oregon's sharpshooting Ron Townsend, Oregon Tech's tough Dave Carrigan and Eastern Washington's sensational freshman Ron Cox.

Townsend led the conference in scoring with an average better than 20 points per game. Carrigan not only finished among the scoring leaders but lead the Evergreen Conference in assists. Cox was among rebounding leaders and led the Eagles to a share of the conference crown.

Junior Varsity Season Ending

Nearing the end of the 1973-74 basketball season, Eastern Washington's junior varsity split a pair of games last weekend.

Last Friday evening the Eagle JV came back after an eight-point halftime deficit to overcome Eastern Oregon 75-64. Sam Martinez led the Eagle attack with 14 points, Gary Livermore netting 20 for the Mounties.

Saturday the Eagles lost to Lewis and Clark State 67-61. Jerry Nelson's 26-point performance sparked the triumph for LC along with Gary Forrest's 19. Matt Westman topped Eastern Washington scorers as he got 18 points to Sam Martinez's 16.

EWSC junior varsity completed its season last night against the Whitworth Pirates.

EASTERN WASH. JV (61) — Keith Harper 6, Jim Green 3, Brian Twietmeyer 6, Matt Lesman 18, Steve Sullivan 4, Sam Martinez 16, Doug Howell 8.

Girls Win Meet, Chulos Leads

With one of their finest efforts of the year Eastern's women's gymnastics team finished first in a four-way meet last weekend.

The Eagles were led, as usual, by Linda Chulos, who captured the around title with 32.80 points. EWSC's Bunny Moody came in second at 30 points with Tris Ellis third with 29.60.

Chulos captured the floor exercise, bars and beam with Moody second in each of those events.

This coming Saturday the Eagles travel to Pullman's Bohler Gym to compete against five other Northwest colleges.

Ducks Capture Pullman Meet

University of Oregon captured last week's Pacific Northwest Championship at Bohler Gymnasium in Pullman with a total of 312 points.

University of Washington finished second and host Washington State third. Eastern Montana came in first among small colleges totaling 109 points to EWSC's 106.

Eastern coach Jack Benson was pleased with his team's performance, John Reese, Terry Kelly and freshman Al Smith in particular.

Next scheduled action for the gymnasts is this weekend against Oregon College of Education in Monmouth.

SHARPSHOOTER IN ACTION—Eastern Washington's Wanda Mason is shown in practice session this week. Last week she fired a perfect 300.

Woman Sharpshooter Hits National Record

By Roger Sandon
Staff Writer

Eastern's Wanda "Deadeye" Oliver found herself among the elite in riflery as she fired perfect 300 for 300 in the Intercollegiate Sectionals held here last weekend.

Oliver's first ever fete established a new national record in the individual International target competition. The record was previously held by 11 other shooters with scores of 299 for 300 including the top woman shooter in the world, Margaret Murdock. Oliver's record also includes four extra bullseyes from the standing position.

"Deadeye" Oliver also tied the International record in the kneeling position shooting 199 for 200.

It turned out to be a record smashing weekend as Eastern's Red team established a new school record on International targets of 2268 for 2400, erasing that of 2251 set in the fall of 1972. Oliver led the team with 580 for 600, followed by Martha Jo Messex with 569, Ray Oliger firing 563 and team captain Rich Rains hitting 556.

In the Conventional competition it was Eastern's red team arising victoriously for the second time as they edged Montana State by one point in a tie breaker, 773 to 772. Again it was Oliver taking scoring honors with 295 for 300, followed by Rains with 293, Oliger 292, and Messex 288.

"It takes a while for something like that to sink in," said Oliver of her new national record. She also mentioned that she is extremely pleased with her rifle, a 52E model Winchester, which is about the first of its kind to "make it."

Oliver is a candidate for All-American recognition, and with her eyes on the future Olympic Games she will soon be attempting to gain a position on the United States Rifle team.

This weekend the team travels to Reno, Nevada to compete with 18 other schools, again including arch rivals, MSU.

SPICE Program Attempts To Understand Minority Needs

School Projects in Intercultural Community Exploration (SPICE) is a program whose goal is to encourage full participation in community processes by the minority constituency.

Cecil T. Jose, director of the SPICE program at Eastern, said the program focuses on the school as the institution within which participation may initially take place.

Funded by the Federal government SPICE is currently working with 50 to 60 school districts in Washington, Oregon and Idaho.

Jose said the purpose of SPICE was to extend from just an awareness to a cognitive understanding of the needs of minority students and to implement plans of action, alternatives and strategies to modify the school.

Prior to becoming involved with a school district, however, Jose said, they must receive an invitation which usually comes from the superintendent of the district.

Jose said that once the invitation is received, SPICE, in cooperation with the school district, explores the function, resources and organization of the community to determine the problems they are encountering.

"A lot of times there is a sincere effort on the part of the school system to change in order to address themselves to the needs of the minority students but they lack the relationship with the community in recognizing resources and gaining the support of the minority community," he said.

Jose pointed out the lack of support from the minority community goes back to the administration and teachers of a school district in that they have usually not had any classes or experiences in minority affairs.

Jose said SPICE attempts to make the school district and the minorities involved aware they cannot institute change on their own. "SPICE gets the two groups working together on the ground level of proposed programs," he said.

Although SPICE involves Blacks, Chicanos and Indians the program is not an attempt to unify the three minorities. "We respect and support one another's needs but at the same time demand autonomy," said Jose.

Jose explained that unification is viewed as a melting pot philosophy which would mean assimilation rather than acculturation. Acculturation, as defined by Jose, means taking the best of both the minorities values and non-minorities values and applying them to contemporary life styles.

Jose said the SPICE concept of desegregation does not include the school as a filtration system through which minorities are filtered into the mainstream of the dominant society.

He added, however, the SPICE concept of desegregation is not an indictment, duplication or exploitation of existing or proposed school-community educational projects.

Brandt Helps Organize Vets Chapter In Prison

By Rob Allen
Staff Writer

The first nationally recognized veteran's organization inside prison walls has been organized with the help of an Eastern student.

Dennis A. Brandt, secretary-treasurer of the EWSC Veterans Cooperative, has been instrumental in establishing a chapter of the Association of American Veterans (AMVETS) at the Washington State Penitentiary at Walla Walla. The post of World War I, World War II, Korean and Vietnam era veterans was established Sunday at the minimum security block II at the prison.

Brandt said his interest began in the project last year when he heard about a group at Walla Walla called Veterans In Prison (VIP's). Brandt and several representatives from the Vet's office in Showalter Hall then made a trip to the prison in December.

"We thought we would go down to see what we could do for them," Brandt said.

During the first visit the prisoner's asked Brandt if he could assist in obtaining Washington State flags to fly over the maximum and minimum security blocks at the institution. Brandt put the VIP's in contact with Mr. and Mrs. George Brown, Spokane, who went through a two month struggle to get the flags inside the prison gates.

With the help of Brandt and the Brown's the VIP's then sought to become a recognized charter of AMVET's. The charter was granted Feb. 15 and presented to the prisoners Sunday night.

Professor McConnell has the power to lecture in a dozen classrooms at once...

John McConnell takes a seat at a special console in the audio-visual center at Washington State University facing a battery of TV cameras and monitors to lecture on business law.

There are no students in the room as he talks over the TV circuit. Electricity gives Dr. McConnell the power to lecture to hundreds of WSU students in classrooms, and wherever the circuit reaches.

This use of electricity in the audio-visual center is only one of many on the WSU campus. Electricity powers highly sophisticated electronic equipment in most major colleges and universities.

To produce the power needed, new electric generating facilities must be built now. They must be built for more efficient performance with the best safeguards for the environment.

While all this research and building is going on, we are sure that if everyone cooperates and nobody wastes, there will be enough electric energy to meet the needs.

NOT AGAIN -- Dick Edwards sank 32 points but Eastern still fell to Puget Sound 69-65. This eliminates any hope that the Savages could go to the playoffs.

QUICKLY NOW -- EWSC plans to open a junior college branch in Spokane next fall. Several acts were chosen at the AS talent show to represent Eastern at an exchange show with Whitworth. Eastern's rifle team tremendously outshot the Pullman and Gonzaga squads. Industrial Arts will offer a course on general home repairs, which is good also for home economics credit.

At Legislature Meeting Constitutional Revisions Considered By Leg

By Jim Macknicki
Managing Editor

Two Constitutional revisions that would alter student government dramatically from its present form were considered at the Legislature meeting Feb. 20.

One plan proposed by Legislator Frank Marksman and Director of Elections Pat O'Donnell would eliminate the present executive offices replacing them with a speaker elected from the Legislature.

The other plan proposed by legislator Mike Carter would increase the president's position giving veto power but would also enable the Legislature to initiate impeachment proceedings.

No Action

No action was taken on either proposal with the Legislature considering the proposals as a committee as a whole. Backers of each proposal were given a half hour to explain and argue their proposal.

Under the Marksman-O'Donnell proposal the offices of president, executive vice president and administrative vice president would be eliminated. In place of the present executive offices the Legislature would elect from its members a speaker who with his cabinet would retain the executive power of the AS.

Elected by a majority of the legislators every quarter a speaker could be removed from office by a two-thirds vote of all the members of the Legislature. There would be no limit to the number of terms a legislator could serve as speaker and the Legislature would be increased in size by three members.

Alleviate Problem

Speaking in favor of the proposal Marksman said it was an attempt to alleviate the problem of one powerful person and pointed to the lack of responsiveness to the Legislature of the past two administrations.

O'Donnell said there were several advantages to the proposal which included:

- it would increase competition between the legislators which should result in better legislators

- a person seeking the office of speaker would first have to prove his worth as a member of the legislature

- elections each quarter would be a referendum on how student government is doing and would provide student input

- the proposal would make the speaker more responsible to the Legislature who in turn would be more responsible to the voters.

Regarding the responsibility of the speaker to the Legislature O'Donnell said, "You are given a job to do and if you do it you remain in office. If you don't do the job you are going to be kicked out."

Year too Long

O'Donnell added an entire year is too long to have a president in office who is not responsible to the Legislature. O'Donnell cited the Jeff Riddle administration as an example saying it was Riddle who gave away the Isle Union Building and who was instrumental in changing Eastern's mascot name from the Savages to the Eagles, which was contrary to student wishes.

Legislator Jim Wallingford objected to the proposal pointing out that if there is a number of turnovers in the speaker inexperienced students would be heading up student government. "All the cabinet people may be new which will result in a bunch of people running around not knowing anything."

AS President Carol Worthington agreed with Wallingford and said anytime an executive makes an unpopular decision he could be removed from office. Worthington also stressed the importance of having some kind of form to student government all year.

Can't Do Any Worse

Legislator Eric Burd objected to having the speaker elected every quarter but seemed to favor the plan. "We can't do any worse than we are doing now," he said.

Carter, in speaking for his proposal, said the Marksman-O'Donnell plan was modeled after the British Parliamentary form of government while his plan followed the traditional American system of government.

Four Points

Carter listed four points that would make the Marksman-O'Donnell plan inoperative. These included:

- students would have no direct say in the executive branch of government

- fighting among the legislators could result that many last for a quarter or more

- there would be too much Legislature control over student government

- Carter also raised the question, "Who ever heard of an AS Speaker?"

Then began questioning the motives behind the Marksman-O'Donnell plan directing his attack at O'Donnell.

Legislator Ken Housden interrupted Carter and said, "We are here to talk over two Constitutions not to cut each other down."

Stronger President

Carter then continued saying he believed student government needed a stronger executive branch but he had provided for impeachment should an ineffective president be elected.

Under Carter's plan the president's power would be enhanced as the president would have the power to veto legislation. "It gives the president a chance to send legislation back to the Legislature for reconsideration," Carter said.

Two-thirds majority vote of the Legislature would be needed to override a presidential veto under the Carter proposal.

Carter added the executive branch would be responsible to the Legislature in that the president would be required to submit quarterly reports to the body.

Hayes Objects

Legislator Pat Hayes pointed out the executives are already required to report to the Legislature but they haven't been doing so. Hayes also asked Carter, "Who ever heard of a President of the United States in 1776?"

Housden then suggested eliminating one vice president and lowering the amount of signatures needed for recall. "This would probably accomplish the same thing as the O'Donnell plan," he said.

Executive Vice President Larry Stueckle said as he understood it when the Constitution committee was appointed they were to make revisions and not propose a drastic change.

Marksman replied the proposed Constitution was basically the same except for the executive branch.

Further debate on the two proposals was put off one week.

In other action the Legislature turned down a proposal by President Worthington to restructure the Services and Activities Fees Committee favoring instead an effort to regain control of the money from the committee.

"The Legislature also tabled for one week a motion asking Administrative Vice President Tom Rantz, who was not present at the meeting, to pay for the recount of ballots from the Feb. 6 General Election.

Management Of Future Proposed By Theobald

By Ken Firoved
Staff Writer

"The future is going to get more interesting, difficult, and dangerous, and either we learn to manage the world or we don't survive," said Robert Theobald, consultant, author, and speaker to an audience of about 300 persons in Showalter Auditorium Monday.

Theobald, a British citizen with a M. S. in Economics said that "unless an alternative future is chosen, the world will split between white and non-white. Rich countries will oppose poor countries, with the rich countries monopolizing the world's raw materials."

The problem stems from the enormous gap between what we know and what we communicate, Theobald said.

"Essentially there are four parallel universes operating in the world right now, and we can't communicate because we are not aware that we live in these different universes. We don't listen to words any more and there is no trust within our society because we fear everyone is trying to manipulate each other," he said.

New Reality Needed

"A new reality has to be invented," Theobald said. Our educational institutions utilize a grading system which is irrelevant in life. Grades don't determine how well one will succeed in life, grades show how well one will do in getting grades, he said.

"There is in each child a human being, and it is the educators' responsibility to find that human being. Unless we care more for the people we work with than we care for the task we are doing, the task will never get done," Theobald said.

People who are different from ourselves must be viewed as interesting, not threatening, he said.

Reform Takes Courage

Opportunities must be created for people so that they can determine what they want in America's third century, Theobald said. EWSC can run any program it wants but it is more comfortable to talk about Vietnam or problems in some other area of the world than to try to reform your own campus because it requires too much moral courage. It is small actions on local levels, not national levels which will determine whether change can be effected, he said. "If everyone would use their guts and their skills, then the system could be changed. It is not necessary to know where we are going in the future. If we know 'who we are' we can cope with the future," he concluded.

Nearly 100 students met with Theobald in the PUB Council Chambers for a discussion session following his speech.

French Class To Study In Montreal

Eastern students will study in Montreal, Quebec, starting April 1 for the first time in a program devised for students of the French language.

Twenty students have enrolled for the initial program, Dr. Cornelius J. Groenen, EWSC associate professor of French, said.

"Purpose of the French-Montreal studies program is to allow students a foreign experience while receiving resident credit at EWSC," he said.

Classes will be held at the four-year-old state Universite du Quebec a Montreal and will be instructed by Groenen. The Universite is located in the city center within walking distance of museums, art galleries and the civic arts complex.

The 15 credit academic program includes selections of 20th century French-Canadian literature, history of French civilization and French language. Students will be placed in the homes of French-Canadian families near the Universite.

Students enrolled in the program include Kathryn S. Borg, Martha J. Chambers, Mari C. Chapman, Sylvia L. Green, Kathleen E. Kuharski, David M. Leath, Kelly C. McManus, Elizabeth J. Mitchell, Kevin J. O'Brien, Kim M. Riskosky, Sherri K. Ritz, Debra J. Shields, Jeanne M. Thorsen, Richard P. Hebron, Leanne Long, Judith A. McCormick, Ronald L. Palczek, Kay W. Riggs, Maryann Lee, and Roya Molvai.

Gilmour Gets Award

Dr. Ernest Gilmour, geology department, has been named an "Engineer of the Year" for the Inland Empire section of the American Institute of Mining Engineers (AIME).

He was honored last week by the institute in connection with the observance of Engineers' Week.

Gilmour and Fred Munich, graphic illustrator of the EWSC Instructional Materials Center, prepared a 20-minute slide show dealing with a summer education program in mining for secondary school teachers in the Inland Empire.
